

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for accomplishing an electronic image information transmitting service, comprising steps of: selecting by a second party whether or not to receive the electronic image information transmitting service; inputting by a first party with an inputting means information regarding the second party and a selection result by the second party in the selecting step; converting by the first party an image on a developed photographic film or on a developed photographic paper exposed based on the developed photographic film into electronic image information when the second party selects so as to receive the electronic image information transmitting service; accumulating the electronic image information converted by the first party in an accumulating means; and transmitting the electronic image information by a transmitting means through a communicating means to a reception destination designated by the second party.